KARPIS KIDNAPI Plot Foiled

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 20 (US).—A daring plot to kidnap Louis W. Hill, Sr., former head of the Great Northern Railway, and Richard C. Lilly, president of the First National Bank of St. Paul, for $1,000,000 ransom, was asserted today in usually reliable quarters to have been frustrated by the recent break-up of the Karpis-Barker gang.

Federal agents have been informed Hill and Lilly were to have been held for $500,000 ransom each. An alleged "finger man" in the plot was said to be a St. Paul han who asked $200,000 as his cut of the total ransom "take."

PLAN TO KIDNAP HILL

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 20 (US).—In a copyrighted story, the St. Paul Daily News today revealed plans had been made for the kidnaping and million dollar ransoming of two of St. Paul's most prominent and wealthy citizens—Louis W. Hill, Sr., and Richard C. Lilly.

The newspaper said that plans for the "snatching" were discussed at the Bensonville, Ill., hideout where Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul bank president, was held prisoner for three weeks by kidnapers early in 1934.

Breaking up of the Barkey Kapins mob by Federal agenta may have prevented the actual carrying out of the plans, the newspaper said.

northwest of Chicago, where Edward G. Bremer was held captive until $200,000 ransom was paid, was found shot to death yesterday, an apparent suicide.

Chief Wagner's death came within twenty-four hours after reports from St. Paul, Bremer's home, that while the wealthy brewer was held plans had been laid in Bensenville for a $1,000,000 kidnaping of two of Minnesota's wealthiest mentuouis W. Hill Sr. and Richard C. Lilly.

The police chief was found seated on an unturned bucket in a garage at the rear of Bensenville's village hall, a bullet wound in his head and his service pistol beside him.

Village President George Runge said Chief Wagner's work had been unsatisfactory for some time and that his resignation was asked yearerday morning.

Relatives said Chief Wagner, who was 36, had been moody since the Bremer hiding place was expose.

T was the old Jesse James trail all over again-for Fred Barker and Alvin Karpis and their gang -before that final blow-off at Okla-waha, Fla., which wiped out a viper's nest and its evil spawn. There were bank and post office jobs in Shamreck, Tyron, Ripley, Boley, Inola and Bixby—Oklahoma towns; also Concerdia, Benton and Oxford, Kansas, with a broad and bloody trail leading through Missouri.

And all this time the withered fingers of spidery, crafty Ma Barker, like satanic tentacles, controlled the skeins on which dangled the fate of desperadoes whose activities hit the headlines on an average of once a

One of Ma's minor satellites, Harry Sawyer, hid out Dillinger. Ma may even have done so herself, down there by the railroad tracks in Tulsa, for she was the "roundhouse" of all criminal information. But from Ma nothing could be learned. Any time there was a stick-up or a killing the cops always arrived too late.

"Yeh, I know," she used to great them at the door, "Willie's been knocked off. Now, beat it. There's nobody here."

There never was. Ms was always

They were all living up in St. Paul with Dunlop, Old Man Barker's succassor, renting a residence under an assumed name—Karpis, Fred Barker, Ma and Old Arthur. Then, one morning, they found Old Arthur's body on the shores of a Minnesota lake, surrounded by the tracks of two mea and a woman. The latter were never traced. Neither-for some years to come-were Ma and Fred and Alvin. It was said at the time that Dunlop was in the way. He was too old to get around when they had to jump town, for one reason or another— and mostly both. Lucky, perhaps, that his predecessor, Old Arthur Dunlop, Hubby No. 1—now an honest and harmless sute camp attendant near Joplin, Mo.,—had left Ma when he did.

Another of Ma's men, Eddy Hogan, carelessly stepped on his auto starter one day in St. Paul and was blown to perdition. Before this encouraging development, however, Hogan was understood to have had some part in the St. Valentine Day massacre of the "Bugs" Moran mob in Chicago. More than that, Hogan and Sawyer, according to the relentless Burns pursuers, were even in on one of the biggest underworld murders of the generation—they were with the unidentified men who bought the gun that killed Arnold Rothstein!

Yes, Ma and the boys were riding high and even going higher. A little more than a year ago Edward Bremer was picked out of the routine of his life at Rochester, Mich., and not returned until the sum of $200,000 was duly paid and posted. William Hamm, a St. Paul brewer, was also "lifted" to Meet Her Fate.

They even claim—that is, Ma and Fred and the rest—they had no con-nection with the Union Station massacre in Kansas City, although the Barkers were in town that day and the prisoner the assassins attempted to "deliver" was Frank Nash, a member of their old Central Park gang back

But quite the most malicious jets was the way Ma's darlings finished that cop in St. Paul three years ago. They shot, both of them, without givwere suspected on general principles. Ing the man a chance for his life, nothing definite was ever proved. They could have avoided actual against them. Ma liked to de herse marker. But apparently they didn't want to. They quite obviously wanted the man dead.

It all grew out of a payroll enatch, the messengers into the bank, where all three were knecked off without ceremony. Meantime, there was a cop at the curb in his automobile and he was potted by a man at a hamburger stand-these Burns accounts are so vivid-15 feet up the street.

The hamburger fancier hadn't waited for developments. He shot while all was tranquil and screne. More than that, having scored his bull's-eye, he went over to the officer on the floor of the car and drilled him again.

But, worse than that, she had these

But, worse than that, she had these trigger-fingers working so fast that two of them went off and killed Sheriff C. R. Kelly down in West Plains, Mo.,—without warning or reason.

"Only a hick peace officer," must have been the thought as Fred Barker and Alvin Karpis mowed him down, disdainfully. "Served him right for asking questions." And then they gave it no further thought—because their thought was all concentrated upon a getaway from the scene.

These trivial interruptions were a fly in their content—just a fly. They had just stuck up a store—fust a little $2,000 jest between times, with the really important jobs shead, and already fermenting in that master-minding brain of Ma Barker. But the mere fly must have been a dragon-fly. They had such scant time to get out of town, with the news of the most cold-blooded murder of the territory spreading like wildfire, that one leaped from the car and dodged through the streets and alleys of the town to effect his escape from the gathering mob while the other threw his car in second or high and started with a jerk that would shake off anyone who might have jumped the running-board.

They both got away—that is, they got away from the negative as any area.

They both got away—that is, they got away from the usual type of pursuit. It was a snap, so these arrogant "big shot" executioners told each other, to give the slip to these country mobs who were so imbued with a sense of fearlessness that they thought it necessary to advertise their advent by sticking out their chests—and making excellent targets of themselves.

But there was any that is, they got a supplied that they are the supplied to the gets of themselves.

But there was one, the most interested of them all, among the outraged citizens they had left behind, who, later developments proved, was not playing the game that way. She—for it was a she—matched their skill, and outmatched it. If Ma Barker was partly an Indian, as is claimed, this woman, although 100 per cent Caucasian, might have been a full-blooded savage, for she stalked her prey as only a full-blooded redskin could. And, with that same all-consuming passion for vengeance, hounded and worried Ma as a mastiff might please to prolong the life of a rat. please to prolong the life of a rat.

That woman was Mrs. C. R. (Lulu) Kelly, wife of the slain sheriff. And it was now woman against woman. At last Ma Barker had overmatched herself.

NEXT WEEK: The graphic fact-story, in all its amazing details, of how Ma Barker, she-devil of Ameri-ca's most brutal outlaw band, sicked the remnants of her blood-mad mur-darage on their last inh

DOGGED SEARCH FOR AL KARPIS PROCEEDS

Government Unrelenting in Hunt for Bremer Kidnap-- ing Suspect.

Chicago, March 29.—(P)—Alvin Karpis, the nation's most-hunted criminal, has done the most complete fadeout midwestern law officials can remember, but they haven't given up hope.

Last of the big-shot public enemies, Karpis will turn up sooner or later, police say, and they expect an early reappearance of the gangster who machine-gunned his way from an Atiantic City hotel January 21 and went into hiding. No trace of him has been found since. Wanted by the Federal government for the $200,000 kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker, January 17, 1934, Karpis has evaded capture for more than thirteen months.

Although Karpis and Harry Campbell, an accomplice, shot their way from the Atlantic City police trap, authorities arrested two gang "molls" who were left behind. The two women, Winona Burdette, 21 years old, and Dolores Delaney, 19, have been sentenced to prison for harboring the criminals.

The hunt for Karpis, regarded as the nation's No. 1 public enemy, never ceases. During the recent Federal nationwide raids a big part of what the raiders were seeking was a tip to Karpis' hideaway.

Fate here interposed, producing an innocent farmer driving into town for a big day at the horse trough. He detached his team, hauled the bandit out of the ditch, accepted his thanks and continued on into a suddenly insane town.

By that time, in fact, the entire county was aroused, with the result that the female spider who lurked within the recesses of the web was routed out for the first time. Ma Barker was definitely on the "lam," with the law in full Probably Fred Barker and Alvin Karpis thought little of the killing of Sheriff C. R. Kelly, of West Plains. Mo. Just another incident, perhaps, in the trail of blood they left from one end of the Ozarks to the other.

But actually this was the blowoff for the Barkers. From that moment, they were always on the defensive.

They never recovered. Why?
There were several reasons but probably the most impelling was that the successor to Sheriff C. R. Kelly. of West Plains, Mo., was Mrs. Luly Kelly, his wife. Ma Barker, indeed, had outmatched herself. She wasn't playing around with a lot of dolts now. It was female against female Letters, posters, descriptions and succedents flooded the mails from Mrs. Lulu Kelly's office.

"We want the murderers of Sheriff C. R. Kelly," was her insistent mes-sage to all sources of surveillance. "They are Fred Barker and Alvin

From that moment, Barker and Karpis were more than wanted men. They were hunted everywhere they went, followed, often preceded, by graphic and revealing descriptions. Mrs. Lulu Kelly was very much on the job. She still is. In fact, the lady sheriff of West Plains will stay en the job up to and including one development. She has promised to resign the moment the killers of Sheriff C. R. Kelly are accounted for. She must have loved this man with ware devotion and, in truth, it would seem from the record that this gal-lant officer did not die in vain.

It was a particularly brutal-not a journeyman job but just such a one as might be conceived in the brain of Ma Barker, engaged in an ternal vendatta with the police.

Mrs. Lulu Kelly undoubtedly was fust like any other housewife in West Plains, Mo., until the day a couple of outlaws happened into town and stuck up a store. It was a small, trivial job—a stick-up for $2,000. Somebody told the theriff that there were a couple of strangers having a job done at the town garage and he ambled down to see what it was all about.

"What are you fellows doing in town?" he asked, approaching Barker and Karpis, both sitting tight in the front of the car. Without parley, they opened fire, shooting Kelly down as though he was a stuffed shirt. With that, the killers separated, one of them—identity not developed. —jumped from the car and took it on the run up the street. The other murderer stuck with the car, heading the other way.

Both ultimately got back to their hideaway at Thayer, Mo., the one on initely on the "lam," with the law in full CTY.

They all lammed so rapidly that they left their letters and insurance policies behind them. Also a great deal of entertaining data, including the fact that the Thayer, Mo., hideout was virtually a citadel.

Karpis was known in Thayer as George Dunn. Fred Barker called himself kay Hamilton, which is worth talking about, in view of the fact that Ray Hamilton, Southwest bandit.

sometimes was known as Fred Barker. Anyhow, the West Plains incident, apparently unimportant except to a certain Mr. and Mrs. Kelly, was an abiding factor in the ultimate fate of the Barkers.

Ma Arizon Clark Barker, had sponsored the killers of a woman's husband and Mrs. Lulu Kelly, it was a einch, wouldn't rest until one and sil were breight to book.

From that moment began the great battle, the enraged female against the wall-vely, unwholesome mother who thought up evil ideas faster than the underworld could use them. Ma never knew, of course.

All she was able to grasp was that, every time they meved into a new town, they had to jump. The cops, strangely, were onto them. They had no resting place—and little wonder!
Lulu, the lady sheriff, had them billed in advance! Every post office, police station and government agent had a likeness of the mun who had wantonly killed her husband. Fred Barker and Alvin her nusping. Free Barker and cliving Karpis had the red mark of Cain upon them and Lulu, ence on the trail, never stopped riding it. She rede it finally into Chicago's where, with the sid of Federal agents and the Burns men, she finally began to close in on this female spider. The first thing they did was to collar Arthur ("Dec") Barker and put the screws on him so hard that the lives of Fred and Ma seemed trivial. JACKSON, Miss., March 30 (U.P.) .- Federal agents and county officers guarded the Hinds county jail tonight against any possible effort by Raymond Hamliton, notorious desperado, to rescue three women who are being held in connection with his holdup of a bank in Prentiss, Miss.

Two of the women, Dorothy and Estelle Davis, are reported to have had other bandit connections before they became associated with Hamilton, who gave a score of Mississippi posses the slip in a daring flight across the State Friday.

The third woman, Mrs. Virgie Johnson, a native of Jeff Davis county, and a fellow prisoner with the Davis women in the Shreve-port jail, was brought to the Hinds county prison Saturday morning. Federal agents questioned the women in an effort to learn more about Hamilton and to obtain a clue as to his destination. The Davis woman claims Mrs. Johnson had nothing to do with planson had nothing to do with plan-

A Terrific Gun Battle with Besieging G-Men Spelled the Finish of the Incredible Machine-Gun Mother—Continuing the Exclusive Story of Her Bloody Career and Inevitable End.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

IX hours of constant bombardment had passed, during which 1,500 rounds of ammunition had been poured into the upper windows of the Barker citadel, where "Ma" Barker, the "brains" of the ruthless band of bandits of that mame, crouched with her son Fred, weakling spawn of the outlaw breed, firing back between choking spells as tear gas bombs spread their acrid stench. Then came a lull in the firing.

Then came a lull in the firing. "Come out, Ma; nobody'll get hurt," bouted a G-man.

Derisive laughter, and a salvo of shots, was the answer—a fusillade that almost tore away the cover behind which the Federal officer crouched.

And when, moments later, another and the Fred to sive his matter.

crouched.

And when, moments later, another appealed to Fred to give his mother a chance, the old crone croaked:

"He ain't giving himself up and I don't want a chance from the likes of you. Come and get me."

Hours later, they came and got her—all that was left to get. In one corner lay this pampered, psychopathic son, eleven slugs in one shoulder and three in his head. By the window was all that was left of Arrie Kate Barker, the inevitable machine gun cradled in her blousy old bosom. One shot had finished her. She never knew that another of the clan, Arthur "Doc" Barker, had given her the finger when arrested in Chicago. She was his mother and he loved her, as apparently all the Barkers loved. She also was reputedly The Brain that planned, executed and micessfully carried through the $200,000 Bremer "match," perhaps even the Union Station massacre at Kansas City, perhaps the William Hamm job and innumerable bank and payroll coups that brought Doc and his brothers at least a half million dollars in less than a year.

But police pressure must have been heavy or else Doc elected to forget the old hag's teachings, for he hardly lived up to the Barker tradition. Neither did another brother, Lloyd, now in Leavenworth. But, at least, they lived, That's more than can be said for the rest of the family, unless you want to include the father, George, who quite pointedly doesn't wish to be included. mitted suicide while resisting arrest.

Yes, old George lives. But another of Ma's husbands doesn't. Benign as a deacon in appearance, his name was George W. Dunlop, the father of a St. Louis policeman. And one morning, the cops found old Dunlop, nude to the neckband and "shot through and through," as the reports of the Burns men so aptly put it, on the shore of a Minnesota lake. The tracks of two men and a woman were found by the body.

The Burns men, who had followed the bloody trail of the Barkers through Oklahoma, Missouri, Kansas, Minnesota and a good part of the North American continent, seemed to entertain few doubts as to who the woman was who made these tracks.

After all, they knew their woman! Hadn't they spent patient, tedious months trying to catch up with this withered, unseen hand that pulled the withered, unseen name that puned the strings and made the puppets dance? Hadn't the G-men gone after Fred and "Doc" and the elusive Alvin Karpis largely with the idea that, if they got these murderous errand boys, they must inevitably get The Razin? Brain?

The Feds and the Burns men quite obviously operated together on this premise, as J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Department of Justice, practically admitted after the Oklawaha execu-

"They were the most dangerous and intelligent gang we had to cope with. No individual was safe as long as they operated. And Ma Barker was the directing genius. get her—and we did!"

Ironically, the combination Female Fagin and Calamity Jane had to die to hit the headlines. Before that, nobody knew her—so wily was she—except the G-men, the Burns men and the trigger men of the underworld.

Dillinger, it seems, knew her quite well. So apparently did Harvey Bailey and "Machine Gun" Kelly, the Urschel snatchers. Her manifold activities caused her to cross paths with theirs, one of her men being implicated in the St. Valentine massacre at Chicago and another, now a fugitive from charges of having harbored Dillinger, being hooked up with the purchase of the gun that shot Arnold Rothstein!

In the same way as befell the associates of that legendary gun-woman, Calamity Jane, whose weird Wild West career strangely parallels that of her modern prototype, so did many of the Barkers under Ma come to an unfortunate finish. Fred, her pet killer and light of her filial eye, lay with her on the floor of that Florida hideaway. Herman died apparently by his own hand, Arthur "Doc," the only conspirator available, probably will do life or worse for the Bremer business and other things want other things and other things—many other things. Old Man Dunlop, his receptively mild features long since composed in death, met his finish when the gang decided he was an encumbrance—probably a too garrulous encumbrance. And Son Lloyd is in Leavenworth.

Dressed in buckskin and with a face Dressed in Duckskin and with a face that might cause horses to climb telegraph poles, Calamity stares forth from the pages of history upon a now decadent age of lawsuits and pink teas and a total disregard of a person's liberty. And when they picked up Ma in that room down there in Florida, she was seamed and bloated and ugly, with a face as hard as a stove lid. so. Once in these dead, old days back there in Tulsa and Oklahoma City, she seemingly had been small, even a little petite. They say she was blonde, weighed about a hundred pounds and had small features. Her devotion to her sons, even then headed toward lawlessness, was the only thing about her that seemed to impress the neigh. her that seemed to impress the neigh-

Anyhow, they put the collar en Anynow, they put use sound to Lloyd for a mail-pouch job he claimed was the work of another. And they once sent "Doc" up for life in connection with the murder of a night watchman. He always maintained that he was framed.

Be that as it might, Ma Barker soon was launched upon a career of crime that has known few parallels in history. They say she wasn't a bad looking dame at the start but when they picked her up in a dust pan down in Florida, the guesses on her age ranged anywhere from 55 to 67. She looked more like 80 in her red checkered house dress, her seamed countenance and her fat, blousy middle. Revend a doubt said the God.

Beyond a doubt, said the Godfearing neighbors before the shooting, this mysterious woman from the North was badly in need of a beauty parlor and beyond any further doubt, she had traveled far down the ladder of even outward respectability with her bad-boy sons. Why, she hadn't even been able to make good her boast of dying with her boots on. When G-men finally moved "in on"

Ma's dead body, they found it bare footed.

The long arm of coincidence-The long arm of coincidence—or was it the pointing finger of fate, as it grew upon the horny hand of the smug-faced, squealing Arthur "Doc" Barker—figured dramatically in this bloody denouement, for it was a year almost to the day and hour since Edward G. Bremer had been lifted from the hour since between the family by Me". the bosom of his family by Ma's gang when the G-men cautiously closed in on the smoking and now silent cot-tage at Oklawaha, Fla., to mop up what was left of the crass kidnaping combination.

Gazing on Ma's remains at that time, it would have been difficult to persuade the distressed Bremer that the most perfect "snatch" plot of modern times had been hatched in that acute but Arted mind.
Dillinger crainly didn't think that he was placing himself in jeopardly when he sought sanctuary in her organization when the minions of the law became "unreasonable"—he had no idea that Ma was the mastermind and that her vicinity was a "hot-spot" in which to seek a "hot-spot" in which to seek security.

"Shoot to kill," was Ma's dictum to her four sons, when once she entered actively into their schemes. Later, it was only two sons because Herman, the eldest, was snuffed out in an affray with peace officers and Lloyd wound up doing a 20-year stretch at Leavenworth prison prison.

"Shoot 'em," she usually added, "and if they want to ask questions after that, make a date with them in the morgue. Never be taken alive."

Down in Oklawaha, she and Prod oheyed the Royler tradt.

Fred obeyed the Barker tradi-tion to the last shuddering breath, and even in death, her breath, and even in death, her black eyes were vindictive.

Why?
They saw Ma, in spite of her blond hair, was of Indian blood. She was born Arizon (that sounds Indian, doesn't it?) Clark in the Ozark foothills of Missouri. They also hills of Missouri. They also say that once, when small and petite and more than passable pretty, she had been a devoted housewife and mother. She went to church regularly, minded her own business (even when the "boys" didn't mind their's) and, in the words of the family physician in the old days around Joplin, Mo.:

"She was an honest, hard-working woman."

All that time, the "boys" were in jail and out—Fred for unexplained possession of a "shot" car; Doc for bumping an aged, harmless night watchman; Herman for almost anything lifted a diamond ring of ms mother's and the Burns records show that Ma had to wrestle for it. He didn't last long but, from the standpoint of the Barker boys, he had the right idea. And from the standpoint of Ma at that time, her boys were perfect. "My boys would be goodboys if the police would let them alone," she used to say, a little plaintively and with misguided optimism.

She was busy at that time, trying to keep the boys in order and her real husband, George Barker appeased. The blow-off came about ten years ago. George drifted away, seeking orly peace and quiet. Ma, on the other hand, boldly east her lot with her pampered sons. She turned against law right about face. And of becoming a passive accessery, she went all the way and became the "arain," the ring-leader of the most desperate band of criminals that America in all probability has yet known.

"Neither an individual nor his property was safe while they lasted," says J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Department of Justice. "In many ways they were the smartest outlaws we've encountered. And Ma was the mind behind their operations. She was so smart that we never got anything on her—although we know plenty. We had to kill her to catch up with her."

And, again we ask, why this abrupt transition from respectability to dishonor, from trig young womanhood to a steamy, hard-faced, vindictive old war horse?

She had sent them to school, where their marks were above the average, and she had cooked and scrubbed and kept house for the lot. And now she was through!

So was old George. He was through paying fines and cringing every time the door bell rang. He jumped out on his own and finally wound up as the poor but honest caretaker of an auto camp outside Joplin.

"Keep me out of it," he now says, rather bitterly, and there isn't much difficulty about doing that. Old George undoubtedly has been out of it for more than ten years.

Old Ma, meantime, was very much in. Her sons were adjudged guilty, even when innocent, she insisted. All right; she was a guilty outlaw, too.

They killed and gloated over it; yet Ma remained somewhat religious, with a particular complex for the teachings of Raymond T. Richey, the Texas evangelist.

Maybe she was consistent enough with this not to order any killings on Sunday! We doubt it. Apparently, the Barkers, with Alvin Karpis, killed who and where they pleased—and it usually pleased them no end.

Yet, with each other, they were an almost unwholesomely devoted clan. "To my darling little pal," writes Lloyd from jail, and then winds up with the conventional x's the lover sends to his sweetheart—and these Frisch, missing Reno banker, at a trial to follow the present prosecution of seven persons accused of harboring the slain gangster.

Government officials were declared by the paper to have asserted Mr. Frisch was kidnaped as he left Reno to testify in a New York bunco case against William Graham and James McKay, Reno gamblers, and was killed in the vicinity of Vallejo, Cal.

The Examiner says evidence held by the Government indicated:

That Nelson and John Paul Chase, a companion who is serving a life term at Alcatraz for the murder of one of the two Federal agents killed in Nelson's last battle, killed Mr. Frisch in an automobile and disposed of the body.

That they sent the car to Anthony Moreno, a defendant in the present trial here, who had no previous benection with the Frisch case.

joined there three others who had been free on bond for the arraignment.

The ten did not include Alvin Karpis, current candidate for Public Enemy No. 1 notoriety, but did include his associate, the alleged coplotter of the abduction, Arthur (Doc) Barker.

Pleading not guilty with Barker was Elmer Farmer, tavern keeper at Bensenville, Ill., where Bremer was held; Harold Alderton, whose Bensenville house was identified as the hide-out, and Byron Bolton, of Chicago, all indicted for the kidnaping, and Jess Doyle, Edna Murray, John J. Mc-Laughlin, William Edward Vidler and Philip J. Delaney, all indicted for handling Bremer ransom money.

Federal Judge M. M. Joyce set the trial for April 18.

One other of the indicted is in custody—Bruno (Whitey) Austin, still held in Chicago. Government agents still are seeking Karpis and the rest of the twenty-two indicted.

Commel representing six of the defendants late today filed demurrers attacking the Lindbergh Ednaping law, under which all will be tried as unconstitutional because "transpondation of human beings cannot be determined to be in interstate conmerce."

Gangster Is Hunted in Far West After Woman Aide Is Seen

Doctor to Be Questioned About Bremer Kidnaper, Pal; May Have Undergone Operation

By United Press

SAN FRANCISCO—The Federal agency that wiped out John Dillinger, Baby Face Nelson and Pretty Boy Floyd intensified its search in the Far West today for Alvin Karpis, last "big shot" gangster remaining at large.

Justice Department agents, proud of their record in previous outlaw hunts, were scattered between Reno, Nev., and San Francisco with orders to get the man who figured in the Bremer kidnaping in St. Paul, Minn., and who late last year shot his way out of a police trap in Atlantic City, N. J.

There was evidence that Karpis might have had his face "lifted" to prevent identification. Agents were checking the records of a Vallejo, Calif., hospital to determine whether Karpis or Arthur (Doc) Barker, his companion in many desperate crimis, had submitted to a face-lifting operation at the hespital where George (Baby Face) Nelson and his wife at one time found shelter.

DOCTOR TO BE QUIZZED

A physician was to be questioned about such an operation, said to have been performed just before the outlaw pair returned to the Mid West to kidnap Edward Bremer, scion of a prominent banking family.

Searchers believed that Karpis had contacts in Reno where Baby Face Nelson found assistance, funds, and ammunition before he returned to the Mid West to fall before the guns of Justice Department agents.

WOMAN HUNTED

A red-headed woman, believed to be the consort of Volney Davis, minor figure in the Karpis-Barker gang, was seen in Reno Sunday. She fied in an auto believed driven by Davis.

The car fied toward the California state line but did not reach it, according to highway police checking at the border.

Several weeks ago a machine identified as his was found in the Truckee River near here. Employes of a gold dredge near Auburn, Calif., reported seeing a man answering his description. Several raids on cabins snuggled in the remote high Sierras were made fruitlessly.

This was learned today when Federal Judge M. M. Joyce signed a writ of habeas corpus requiring authorities at the Milan, Mich., women's reformatory to bring Miss Burdette to St. Paul for the trial.

Miss Burdette with Delores Delaney, former St. Paul girl and "moll" of the fugitive Alvin Karpis, is serving live years in the Milan institution for harboring members of the Barker-Karpis gang in southern Florida.

The two were captured when Karpis and Campbell blasted their way out of an Atlantic City ambush several months ago. Miss Delaney has since given birth to a child.

With five members of the gang losing their legal skirmish with the government Wednesday when Judge Joyce denied demurrers and refused bills of particulars, three others will hear their attorneys' plea for demurrers and bills Friday.

The three are James Wilson, who has pleaded guilty to conspiracy but who will change his plea; Jess Doyle and Harold Alderton.

JOLIET PRISONER WILL FACE TRIAL IN BREMER CASE

Otto Berg, a prisoner in the Joliet penitentiary, who is charged with conspiracy in connection with the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, wealthy St. Paul banker, will be tried with the other Bremer suspects in St. Paul this month. A writ for Berg's appearance in federal court there was served on Warden Frank Whipp yesterday.

Berg is alleged to have been involved in the kidnaping in January, 1934, while he was at liberty from the penitentiary on a writ issued here by Judge James J. Kelly. This writ was desolved soon afterward by the Supeme court which ordered Berg remanded to the prison, but he was not represted until last August.

Four Plead Not Guilty to Charge of Harboring Public Enemy

Attorneys for Joe Adams, manager of the Biscayne Kennel club; E. G. McDonald, Nathan Heller and Henry Randall, charged with harboring Alvin Karpis, Bremer kidnaping suspect, in Miami, pleaded "not guilty" today in U. S. district court. Only defendant to appear in the court room was McDonald.

Walter L. Barlow, special assistant to U. S. Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, appeared in the case today and asked Judge Halsted L. Ritter to set trials for the four during the week of June 17. This was granted. Barlow will have charge of their prosecution.

Judge Ritter allowed Bart Riley, attorney for Adams and Heller; J. Walter Kehoe, sr., for McDonald, and William E. Walsh, jr., for Randall, 10 days to file demurrers to the 11 indictments.

A separate trial for McDonald, Detroit and West Palm Beach promoter, may be sought, Kehoe said

Barlow, who has been in Miami for a week, consulting with W. Sanders Gramling, assistant U. Karpis Hunti
Grows Warm
In Far West
RENO, Nev., April 7 (UP).—
Search for Alvin Karpis, current Public Enemy No. 1, was underway here tonight. Authorities also sought a woman with red hair, believed to be the consort of Volney Davis, member of the Barker-arpis gang of bank rabbers and kidnapers.

The search started tonight, after a woman, acting in a nervous manner, entered a local garage, dialed a telephone number, using her coat to conceal the number from the attendant, and asked the person answering the call for "Bob Barker."

She told "Barker" to meet her at the garage within 30 minutes and later at a local gambling establishment.
The attendant notified Sheriff
Ray Root, who went to the gambling hall as an automobile bearing a man resembling Davis and the worsan drove away from the oarb.

Moll To Testify

In Ramsey county jail, brought here from Milan, Mich., women's prison, is WINONA BURNETTE, gangster moll, who will be a government witness in the trial of alleged kidnapers of Edward G. Bremer.

Winona Burdette Here To Testify In Bremer Case

Ramsey county jail's "colony" of alleged kidnapers and their "molls" increased by one today.

Winona Burdette, Harry Campbell's sweetheart, was brought to St. Paul from Milan, Mich., where she is serving a five-year term on charges of harboring Karpis-Barker gangsters in Florida last January. She is to appear as a witness next week when gang members go on trial for the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer.

With Dolores Delaney, St. Paul, she was left behind when Alvin Karpis and Harry Campbell shot their way out of an Atlantic City apartment hotel.

Bruno (Whitey) Austin, indicted here in connection with the kidnaping, will know Thursday whether he has to come to St. Paul. Austin is held in Chicago. Tuesday the federal government asked for his removal to St. Paul. A decision will be given Thursday.

Dozen to Face Trial This Week In Bremer Case

U. S. Opens Prosecution of Alleged Kidnapers of Banker Tomorrow.

Banker Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, April 18.—A dozen persons charged by the Government with a hand in the kidnaping in 1934 of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker, will go on trial in United States District Court here Monday.
George Sullivan, United States district attorney, said the Government will take two to three weeks to present its case, calling on nearly 100 witnesses in its effort to convict the defendants.

Bremer was seized on a street here January 17, 1934, and released February 7, after payment of $200,000 ransom.

Four of the defendants are charged with the actual kidnaping. They are Arthur (Doc) Barker, alleged leader of the abduction gang; Elmer Farmer and Harold Alderton, both of Bensenville, Ill., where Bremer was reported to have been held captive, and Byron Bolton.

Facing conspiracy charges are Edna Murray, known to police as the "kissing bandit;" John J. (Boss) McLaughlin, William Vidler and Philip J. Delaney, all of Chicago, alleged handlers of the ransom money; Jess Doyle, James Wilson, Chicago, and Bruno Austin.

Oliver Berg, serving a life term in the Illinois penitentiary, also will be brought into court for trial on a conspiracy count.

The case against almost all of the 22 persons named in the indictment will be fully presented during the trial, Sullivan said, in order to outline clearly the alleged participation of those on trial. Defendants still at large include Alvin Karpis.

Under Federal court rules, Judge M. M. Joyce will conduct the en-case had been placed under arrest, and that the St. Paul resident, too, had been placed in custody. At the federal building, however, it was intimated that only one man was held.

The prisoner or prisoners were said to be held in the department of justice ofices on the second floor of the federal courts building in St.
Paul. Such a procedure has been followed by the department elsewhere in the country when arrests have been made in the past.
